

2004 Rhode Island Recipients of Amgen Award for Science Teaching Excellence Announced

April 28, 2004

WEST GREENWICH, R.I.--April 28, 2004--Amgen Inc. (Nasdaq:AMGN), the world's largest biotechnology company, has announced the two science teachers in Rhode Island who are this year's recipients of the Amgen Award for Science Teaching Excellence. The Amgen awards honor public or private school science teachers, grades K-12, who demonstrate outstanding science teaching and have a great impact on the lives of their students. Each teacher will receive an unrestricted $10,000 award at a ceremony in May. For more information on the award please contact Amgen at the number below. The 2004 winners are:

- Martha Landes of Park View Middle School, Cranston, RI
- John Wemple of Classical High School, Providence, RI

Nominations are solicited every January and a panel of independent judges select the winners. Judges base their decisions on evidence of the recipients' creativity and effectiveness in the classroom; their application and development of best practices in science education; their motivational ability; and their mastery of the subject matter and instructional skill.

In addition to the Rhode Island program, the Amgen Award for Science Teaching Excellence is granted in California; Colorado; Jefferson County, Kentucky; Boston and Cambridge, Massachusetts; Puerto Rico; Rhode Island; and Washington, locations where Amgen has facilities. Amgen has conducted the awards program for teaching excellence for 13 years in the United States.

Amgen is a global biotechnology company that discovers, develops, manufactures and markets important human therapeutics based on advances in cellular and molecular biology.
